He recited the wonders of Wright's palace at Lea Park-its pleasances, woods and chain of little lakes, its glass room under the lake, rubbed by the tails of swimming fishes, and the great marble fountain, part of which is still in packing cases, but the audience was unmoved. Minutes passed and no bid was made. At last some one offered 190,000. "The wall around the estate cost 137,000," said the auctioneer.

Very slowly the bidding rose to f145,000. Then the property was withdrawn, and Wright's desolate monument will continue to stand in the fairest part of Surrey.

"We found it out pretty quickly ourselves. My household and I no sooner had been installed in the place than the incanniest noises conceivable beset us. There were knockings and rappings, footfalls, soft and loud; hasty, stealthy hurfalls, soft and loud; hasty, stealthy hurryings and scurryings and sounds as of a human creature being chased and caught and then strangled or choked. Doors banged and were opened and closed unaccountably, as if by unseen hands. I would be sitting quietly in the study, writing, when the door would open roundlessly. That in itself was enough, in the dead of night, to a man with his imagination afame. It was susceptible of explanation, however. It is only a bit of a draught, I, would say to myself as I held my breath and watched. But draughts don't turn door handles; and, on my life, the handle would turn as the door opened, and there was no hand visible.

H. Rider Haggard, Novelist, Tells of Remarkable Experience with Canine Telepathy.

Whether Strange Dream Occurred at Moment of Pet's Death or About Three Hours Later Point in Doubt.

SPECIAL BY CARLE TO THE ST LOUIS RE-PUBLIC AND THE NEW YORK HERALD Lendon, July 21—(Copyright, 1991)—A remarkable story of his daughter's dor Bob is told in a letter to the Times by H. Rider Haggard, the novelist.

Bob has been killed by a railway train and Mr. Haggard has had a dream which he considers was caused by telepathic communication from the dog, which sought to call his attention to its plicht. Mr. Haggard tells the story of his dream

"On the night of Saturday, July 9, 1 went to bed about half past 12 and suffered from what I took to be a nightmare. I was awakened by my wife's voice calling to me from her own bed upon the other side of the room. As I woke the nightmare itself, which had been long and vivid, faded from my brain.

and vivid, faded from my brain.

"All I could remember of it was a sense of awful oppression and of a desperate and terrified struggling for life, such as the act of drowning would probably invove, but between the time that I heard my wife's voice and the time that I heard my wife's voice and the time that my consclousness answered to it, or so it seemed to me, I had another dream.

"I dreamed that a black retriever deg, a most amiable and intelligent beast named Bob, which was the property of my oldest daughter, was lying on its side among brush wood or a rough growth of some sort by the water. My own personality in some mysterious way seemed to me to be arising from the body of the dog which I knew quite surely to be Bob and no other, so much so that my head was against its head, which was lifted up at an unnatural angle. In my vision the dog was trying to speak to me in words and, falling, trasmitted to my mind in an undefined fashion the knowledge that it was dying.

"There is a third possibility which I will quote, although the evidence seems to me to be overwhelmingly against it, and for reasons already given it is inherently most improbable—manely that the dog was killed about 6:30 on Monday morning, in which case the dream was nothing but a shadow of its forthcoming fate. Personally, however, I do not for a moment believe this to have been the case."

Kohl confessed that, with the aid of another guide. Alois Bratschy, of St. Gall. he murdered a Swiss Alpinist named Praday at St. Gall, while on a climbing tour in the mountains, during the summer of 1991. The object of the crime was robbery.

Bratschy denies the charge, but the fact remains that Praday mysteriously disappeared at the time, and was believed to have been killed by a fall in the mountains.

French Cabinet Has Made Sharp Demand on Vatican to Protect Two Accused Bishops.

HIS STORY WELL ATTESTED. QUARREL PURELY POLITICAL.

Charge Against Prelates Brought by Enemies Who Dislike Republican Sympathies-Tragedy in Cluses Strike.

Paris, July 21. — (Copyright, 1964.) — The conflict between France and the Vatical continues to be an inexhaustible source of news, of controversies and of politics, and, at the same moment, how do we stand?

It seems certain that the week will not end without a solution. Two Bishops and only two, are brought into the dispute-Mgr. Gcay, whom the ultramontaines of his diocese of Saval necuse of having been twice married and Mgr. de Nordez, Bishop of Dijon, whom priests of his diocese instigated by the congregation of the Sulpicians of Paris, accuse of below a Free Mason

The Vatican, which apparently accepts these accusations, has summoned there two prelates to appear before the Holy Office on July 22, and they have referred this summons to the Government, which has forbidden them to stir out of the country

DEMAND ON VATICAN. The Cabinet has demanded from the Vatican the willidrawal pure and simple of the letters sent to the two Bishops, in default of which the Nuncio will receive his passports and the Embassy accredited to the Vatican will be abolished.

The crisis is thus a sharp one. The Pope seems disposed to take refuge in complete silence and to leave to the French Minis-try the initiative of a rupture. To understand fully all this embroglio it

To understand funz all this embrogue it must above all be remembered that religion has nothing to do with the affair and that the matter is absolutely a political quarrel. The Diocese of Lavai is inhabited by White Royalists, of whom Mgr. Geay, "the Eirhop of the Blues," is the only priest who has sworn to obey the Constitution. As has been their wont for a hundred and fifteen years, they have villified the Bishop because he is not of their persuasion.
